GODDARD DEFEATS FRESHMAN ELEVEN HERE SATURDAY

Yearlings No Match For Heavy Barre Men

SCORE 19-0

Aerial Game Most Promising For Blue

The Freshman team was defeated for the first time this season by the heavy Goddard Seminary eleven last Saturday by a score of 19-0. Three touchdowns were scored in as many periods and only one successful goal kicked. Two of these were made by Shea, captain and quarterback of the Goddard team. Shea's skill in running thru tackle and dodging his opponents led the Academy boys to victory.

The freshmen were outweighed almost 20 pounds to the man. Their lineup on Saturday averaged 152 pounds while that of their opponents averaged some 170 pounds. The freshmen fought hard and weakened little under the attack. Twice within the shadows of the goal the stubborn Blue and White line held. In the last quarter Middlebury opened up an aerial attack in which good gains were made. In this aerial attack lies the future of the team.

Whitney at the fullback position was the mainstay of the Blue's second defense, his tackles being a brilliant feature of the game. Huntington played a stellar role in the pivot position, while Rich at right tackle and Naylor at left end played their usual fighting game.

The freshman team will be given a stiff workout during the next two weeks. A special effort will be made to perfect the forward passes. Since there is no game Saturday, the team works with Norwich as its objective.

The lineup for last Saturday was:

Naylor	le	Malloy
Lance	lt	Clinton
Hasseltine	lg	Winchenbach
Huntington,	c	Bove
Wolfskehl	rg	Rodrique
Rich	rt	Tanton
Eddy	re	Daugherty
Chipman (capt.)	qb	Shea (capt.)
Fales	rh	Ryan
Patch	lh	Saunders
Whitney	fb	Kendrick

Referee, Kalin. Umpire, Tayler. Head linesman, Austin. Substitutions, Middlebury, Dickerman for Wolfskehl, Levine for Fales, Roberts for Levine, Church for Huntington. Goddard, O'Malley for Clinton, Flynn for Bove, Gutshaw for Rodrique, Ryan for Saunders, Gray for Shea.

Professor H. P. W. De Visme lectured in Newburgh, N. Y., Monday afternoon of this week.

Field Hockey Coach To Arrive Tomorrow

Miss Feaver, the skilled English Hockey coach, to whose visit the entire Women's College has been looking forward, will arrive tomorrow morning on the 4:10 train.

The hockey field was not in good condition last week due to the great amount of rainy weather. Starting the first of this week, intensive practice began. The various teams were organized and will be chosen probably before the week is over.

The final inter-class contests bid fair to call for more enthusiasm than has been shown toward any sport in the Women's College since the basket-ball contest of last winter.

BLACK PANTHER TO MEET LION SATURDAY

Seriously Crippled By Injuries of Previous Contests

The Blue and White eleven, seriously handicapped by numerous injuries will leave for New York Friday noon. The team will be quartered during their stay at the Hotel Commodore.

The exact line-up is far from certain as the Campus goes to press, since many of the 'Varsity players are suffering from injuries received in the Tuft's game last week. Papke is out with a severe injury to his back and cannot possibly play. Quackenbush has an attack of neuritis in his arm and unless he improves this week will be unable to start. Mullen and Potter both have leg injuries. Their condition at the end of the week will determine their chance of a place in the line-up. Ehlert, who fractured his wrist in the Harvard game, has recovered slowly and will still be kept out of the line-up. Reigleman is out with injuries to his head received last Saturday. Lobo played three quarters of the Tufts game suffering intense pain due to having two of his ribs torn from place.

With such a hospital list, Coach Morey has taken a chance in putting the squad thru stiff scrimmage the last two days. He was dissatisfied with the showing made last week and is shifting the entire line up in an effort to find the combination who can carry out his assignments properly.

Koppisch In Game

Columbia, on the other hand will place a team on the field that is practically free from injuries. Both Pease, their capable quarterback and the renowned Koppisch will be in their lineup. Putting everything they had against Pennsylvania the week before,

HONOR SOCIETIES TO BE FORMED IN BOTH COLLEGES

As Reward For Excellence In Activities

DETAILS PENDING

Committee To Confer With Student Council

Excellence in extra-curriculum activities is to be rewarded by election to Honor Societies, one of which will be formed in the Men's College and one in the Women's College, announces Prof. J. S. Kingsley, chairman of the Committee on Extra-Curriculum Activities. Election to these societies will be in the hands of those who have charge of the activities involved, meeting together with the Committee.

The Committee is still at work on the details of the plan and will call the Student Council into consultation on the subject before definite action is announced. It is contemplated making scholarship a point of consideration also in making elections to the Honor Societies.

The statement from the Committee follows:

"The Committee on Extra-CurriculumActivities has decided to establish two Honor Societies, one for the Men's College and the other for the Women's College, for excellence in extra-curriculum activities. While the details of the plan are not as yet worked out, it contemplates the following general provisions: first, election may be given for excellence either in one of the major activities, or in a combination of minor activities; second, the attainment of a rank of eighty percent in scholarship; third, elections shall be made by those in charge of the extra curriculum activities involved, in joint session with the Committee.

"The Committee is considering the various activities possible under a comprehensive plan, and after consultation with the student body, through the Student Council, will announce a definite plan for the remainder of the present academic year. This will serve as a basis for the future, such changes being made as will be suggested by experience.

"It is hoped that with the support and co-operation of all, a plan will thus be established to give due honor and definite purpose to this feature of our college life. Success in this will do not a little to strengthen Middebury's leadership in the educational world."

Forum To Discuss Authority of Bible

"How is the Bible different from other books?" will be the question taken up in the Student Forum at the Congregational Church next Sunday morning. E. M. Reighard '27, will preside at this meeting.

Immortality, the idea of the future life and why we hold it, was the general subject of last Sunday's discussion. At the end of each meeting, Prof. J. S. Kingsley briefly summarizes the discussion and gives many interesting and instructive sidelights on the subject.

Coming?

The rumor is that the Baboon is about ready to come out of his den. We are not making any promises, however, as he has a disappointing way of postponing his appearances.

TUFTS GRIDSTERS SNATCH VICTORY FROM BLUE IN LAST TWO MINUTES AT MEDFORD SATURDAY - SCORE 6-3

Perry Tosses Pass To French Who Runs Forty Yards For Winning Touchdown

TEN THOUSAND WITNESS GAME

Klevenow Kicks Goal From Placement in Fourth Quarter — Papke Out With Injury

Tufts College snatched victory out of what seemed defeat last Saturday at Medford, when by scoring in the last two minutes of play, she broke Middlebury's clean slate by the score of 6-3. It made the fifth straight victory for the Jumbos and the first defeat of the season for the Middlebury men.

It was a hard game for Coach Morey's team to lose. After holding Tufts for downs once within the shadow of their goal posts and with only two minutes to play, their three points seemed as good as a million. However, at this point, French, Tufts' backfield flash, caught a pass from Perry on the 40-yard line and dodging the entire Middlebury team ran for a touchdown. The Black Panther had scored at the beginning of the fourth quarter when Klevenow booted a goal from placement from the 30-yard line.

The reputation of the Middlebury team, acquired in the Harvard game, attracted about 10,000 gridiron fans to the Tufts Oval. It was the largest crowd that has ever been assembled there.

The entire Middlebury team played hard but did not have the goods shown against Harvard. Whitney, playing the same consistent game that he has been showing for the last few weeks, was the star for the Blue team. Klevenow and Lobo made some nice gains, while Captain Moynihan played his usual stellar game in the center of the line. Papke played a good game but had to leave the game on account of an injury.

Acting Captain French of Tufts starred for the winners. The whole Tufts team fought hard with the objective of entering the Stadium next week undefeated.

First Half Scoreless

The first half was scoreless, the two teams battling on nearly even terms. At one point the Medford team got within striking distance of the goal-line but the Blue line held and Tufts was

BIG CONVENTION MEETS AT HARTFORD

Twenty-four Colleges And Universities Send Representatives

The Sixteenth Annual Convention of Eastern College and University Men under the auspices of the New England Theological Seminaries was held at the Hartford Seminary, Hartford, Conn., from Friday, Oct. 26, thru Sunday, Oct. 28. James C. McLeod '26, represented Middlebury at this convention.

Two hundred and twenty men represented the various Colleges, Universities and Seminaries thruout the East. Among those who sent two or more representatives were the following: Amherst, Bates, Boston University, Bowdoin, Brown, Bucknell, Colby, Connecticut A. C., Dartmouth, Harvard, Mt. Hermon School, New Hampshire State, Princeton, Rhode Island State, Rutgers, Springfield Y. M. C. A. College, Trinity, Tufts, Union, U. of Maine, Vermont, Wesleyan, and Yale University. It addition to these representatives, who were in the main undergraduates undecided as to their life work, there were numerous theological students from Hartford Seminary, Princeton Seminary, Yale Divinity School, Berkeley Divinity and several others. The representatives were the guests of Hartford Seminary and its friends. Many were housed in private homes thruout the city of Hartford.

The men who had charge of the Convention invited the finest array of speakers procurable. Every one was a specialist in his particular line and gave a definite message of vial interest to young American manhood. Richard Roberts of Montreal spoke on "The World's Need." The keynote of the address was that the world needs more self sacrifice and brotherhood, and less egotism and selfishness. Dr. Henry Sloane Coffin of New York City, a recent visitor to Middlebury, gave two

We especially call the attention of our readers to the communication from "Joe" Peck '98, beginning in the next column.

A Dream That Was Only A Dream

Once upon a time there was a man who was tired. He was not tired of work, nor of play, nor of eating or sleeping. He was tired of being told. It was "Come" and he came. It was "Go", and he went. "Act thus", and he acted. "Be quiet", and he was so. Feeling that he had at last arrived at a sufficiently mature age to govern his own coming and going, his acting and speaking, this situation became very monotonous to him. Between himself and the power that issued these commands, he felt there existed a common interest, the interest of the community of which they were both a part, and it seemed to him that cooperation might well take the place of dictation.

And so the man who was tired of being told sat down and dreamed a dream, and unlike many other dreams this one seemed rational. Viewed from all angles it looked as tho it would work. In fact it seemed to him ideal, and he began to look forward to the time when he should no more be tired of being told. The dream was that of student self-government.

PRIMARY INTERESTS

We were told the other day that Middlebury students as a whole are really interested in only two things: football and dances. As far as the first is concerned, it would be remarkable indeed if it were not so, in view of the recent successes of the Blue team. However, after hearing this simple indictment rather contemptuously expressed, we fell to thinking it over, and the statement seems to be not entirely groundless.

It is natural to take a keen interest in the things one enjoys most. A college is an institution to which people are supposed to come because they want to come, and it is perfectly proper to assume that they come there because they enjoy and have a keen interest in the things which constitute the fundamental reason for the college's existence. The question is then: are we primarily interested in getting a liberal arts education, or in the wholly admirable but nevertheless secondary considerations of athletics and social good times? Not but both of these constitute an important part of the liberal arts program; most will agree that they do. But. should they be allowed to outshine the things for which we supposedly came here?

Two years ago, the English Club was formed, its membership being chiefly of those who were keenly interested in literary endeavor, both past and present. Such members have been numerous and enthusiastic enough to make the Club at least a moderate success. It now faces reorganization and a new year of activity. Its future depends upon the degree of interest here in the ideal for which a literary club in general stands. There may be some disagreement as to what this ideal should be, but we submit that, in the broadest sense, it is the crowning ideal of the liberal arts college, the study of life itself.

"THE COURAGE OF THE COMMONPLACE"

Each year when sorority pledge-day arrives, there are a certain number of girls who are left out. Why this happens time after time, saddening and often embittering the freshmen, is never exactly clear. That everyone is not included is the primary difficulty and yet it is the chief distinction of the fraternities. While not to be chosen is a great disappointment to the majority of girls,some, however, are awakened to a determination of achievement.

The story is told of Johnny McLean, a man of beginnings, who as a Junior at Yale was not tapped for a senior honorary society. His disappointment at not being chosen was keen. Johnny was very young, and at first felt only the chagrin and so-called disgrace of being left out. His father and brothers were Bones men before him. Then inexplicably the words of a college preacher came to him, "The courage of the commonplace is greater than the courage of the crisis." With every spark of his manhood, he determined to make a worthy place for himself in the world.

Three years later he graduated from Tech at the top of his class. The same day he was appointed superintendent of a large western mine. He had kept his resolution thus far and had partially made good. He returned for his class triennial the next spring a nation-wide hero because of his bravery in an accident at his mine. When the President addressed Johnny's class, the same words which had inspired Johnny that memorable Tap-day came also to his lips, "The courage of the commonplace is greater than the courage of the crisis." McLean had proved that saying true and the courage of the commonplace which he had been living had trained him for the courage of the crisis to which he had responded.

So it is here at Middlebury. The girls who make fraternities are no better than those who do not and are not so regarded in the eyes of the College. Some have come who have friends or relatives as students or graduates. Their advantages are perfectly apparent. Some girls have had greater opportunities before entering Middlebury. But a l will become equal here. Others are not chosen now because they are timid and diffident, and the fraternity girls do not know them. That condition also will be equalized before the year is over.

Do not feel in anyway disgraced on your failure to be pledged Thursday night. The girls aren't down on you, so don't become bitter or cynical. You have four years ahead to show your true worth.

Says our generous contemporary, the Vermont Cynic, "Congratulations to Middlebury on her splendid showing against Harvard. Such an exhibition of gameness and courage explains why the down-state college has always been a worthy rival of Vermont. We only wish that the contest had resulted in a defeat instead of a tie for the much touted Crimson."

In commenting on the U. V. M.—Dartmouth game, the same paper ventures to predict that Vermont "will bring home the bacon on Nov. 12," at the same time acknowledging that the state championship will be hotly contested.

So They Say

The Harvard Crimson, speaking editorially, expresses the opinion that the Cambridge institute of learning is getting too large. The size to which it is deemed desirable the university should return is not stated definitely, but in the light of certain happenings of Saturday, Oct. 13, an enrolment approximating that of Middlebury College is believed to be favored.

COMMUNICATION

Middlebury Should Be Last College In East To Restrict Athletics, Says J. A. Peck '98, In Letter

Editor of The Campus:

Dear Sir:

If the attitude of alumni we have encountered is good evidence, nothing which has before happened in the history of Middlebury has done so much to arouse the admiration and pride of her alumni as the great stand the football team made against Harvard this year.

On their two previous trips to Cambridge in 1921 and 1922 Middlebury has played good football and drawn most favorable comment from spectators and newspapers. Two years ago the team was told at a luncheon in Boston that they would serve their Alma Mater if they would put up a hard game of clean football and command sufficient respect to be taken on annually by Harvard to open the season. We little realized that after two years Middlebury would be moved forward to the second place on Harvard's schedule and would give such an exhibition of nerve, pluck and determination, combined with knowledge of football, as to force Harvard, in her desperate and vain effort to win, to uncork plays she would otherwise withhold for her acknowledged competitors.

Aside from the publicity value in the ordinary sense of the term, what a tremendous thing it is for the College to have among its supporters and patrons the reputation of being a rugged, hard fighting, red-blooded institution, with a spirit that breeds men who know not what defeat is. Even greater is the value of that spirit among the students themselves in their own struggles for education.

It is easy to understand why alumni of Dartmouth, Princeton and other colleges believe that their growth and academic success have been largely based on success in athletics.

The general public has little knowledge of academic conditions, but cannot escape impressions of the character of institutions based upon their athletic activities. The keen, quick-thinking, wide-awake boys and girls of secondary school age are those who have intelligent and active interest in athletics. And it is the keen, quick-thinking and wide-awake ones who will make the most of what the colleges have to offer.

In a talk before some of the Spanish students of the College, Judge Wilcox emphasized the wonderful business opportunities in the Latin-American countries at present for college men and women who know Spanish. He expressed great admiration for the way in which Spanish is being taught at Middlebury.

MEYER BLOOMFIELD TO LECTURE NOV. 8

Voational Lecture Series Includes Many Noted Men

The opening lecture of the vocational lecture series will be given by Mr. Meyer Bloomfield of Bloomfield & Boomfield, Consultants in Industrial Relations, Boston. Subject, "Some New Professions in Handling Men in Industrial Organizations." This lecture will be given at 8 p. m. Thursday, November 8, in the lecture room of the Chemistry building.

Mr. Bloomfield was the first lecturer on vocational guidance at Harvard, Columbia, and the University of California. He has written several books the latest of which is "Management and Men", published by The Century Company. Mr. Bloomfield holds a unique position in American Industry. He is consultant for some of the biggest and most important industrial enterprises in the country. He has won the respect of labor throughout the country and is continually consulted by wage-earners and their representatives. Mr. Bloomfield was sent abroad in 1918 to report on new developments in the British labor field and was sent to Russia last winter by President Harding for the purpose of investigating industrial conditions there.

The Committee on the vocational lectures has been at work on the schedule for the coming season and has already secured several speakers of nation-wide reputation. Those for whom dates have already been arranged include the following:

Roscoe Pound, Dean of the Harvard Law School and recognized leader in his profession. Subject, "Law as a Profession."

Dr. James L. Barton, Secretary of the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions, Head of the Near East Relief, for many years closely in touch with diplomatic relations. Subjects (two lectures) 1. "Diplomatic Service" and 2. "The Mission Field."

Mr. W. I. Bullard, Vice President of the Merchants National Bank of Boston, specialist in foreign trade, and lecturer on International Banking at the Tuck School of Business Administration of Dartmouth College. Subject, "Banking Opportunities, Domestic and Foreign."

Dean Wiley goes to New York tonight to confer with several who have been selected by the Committee.

The Committee which is working with Dean Wiley on the series is composed of the following men: Cook, '24, White, '24, Peck, '24, Watson, '24, Austin, '24, Fletcher, '24, Howard, '24, Toeman, '24, Vose, '24, Cooley, '25, Riegelman, '25, Long, '25, and Frank, '26.

Tennis Finals Postponed

The finals in the tennis contest for the college championship have been postponed until next week owing to injuries received by M. J. Rich in the Goddard football game on Saturday.

The contestants in the finals are F. B. Rich '25 and his brother, M. J. Rich '27.

Cross Country Team To Meet R. P. I. Saturday

The Middebury—R. P. I. Cross Country meet will take place over the big triangle Saturday afternoon at 2.30. As R. P. I. is entering ten men three names will be added to the Middlebury lineup, which is as follows: Cook, Kendall, Fish, Kelly, Hancock, Robinson, Hamlin, Lathrop, Dodd, Wexler.

WHY?

Why does Middlebury College support one of the best organized and active Young Women's Christian Associations, but does not even make a pretense of creating a "Christian atmosphere" on the men's side of the campus?

Why it is that one hears remarks, often derisive, concerning the total lack of reverence and contempt for sanctity, exhibited at the morning chapel service?

Why, since the chapel is preeminently the source of spiritual thought at Middlebury, would it not be more worthwhile to vary the routine-like system with which the service is conducted? Why the painful divinity so lacking in the true spirit of Christ?

If we agree that the purpose of the liberal arts college is to broaden a man's mental horizon, why should Middlebury so utterly neglect the spiritual side of a man's life?

"Proud To Be One Of Connie's Men"

When called upon to make a few remarks at the football rally last night in McCullough Gymnasium, Marshall Klevenow, veteran fullback, said, "All I can say is that I am proud to be one of Connie's men, and I think the other fellows will say the same."

The chief speaker was Coach Morey, who urged the boys not only to back up the team to the limit but to endorse football in general at every opportunity. Needless to say, his remarks were received with enthusiasm. Manager Cruikshank and Captain Moynihan also spoke, urging a large attendance at the Columbia game.

President Moody is attending a meeting of the Association of New England College Presidents at New Haven, this week.

INTERCOLLEGIATE

Princeton: By a new ruling Juniors and Seniors, not on probation, are no longer under compulsion to attend either classes or lectures and unlimited absence is allowed them if their studies do not suffer in consequence. This method which is common in foreign universities is based on the assumption that men of college grade are able to decide for themselves when they need to attend classes. The university will discontinue this privilege upon a student's failure to pass a course.

DEAN BROWN OF YALE SPEAKS AT VESPERS

Takes For Text of Sermon, "What Doest Thou Here?"

Rev. Charles R. Brown of Yale took for the text of his Vesper's sermon Sunday, "What doest thou here?" Elijah, to whom this question was addressed, had been a man of strength and vision, and had accomplished great things, but because of one small defeat, he was discouraged. He had allowed himself to fall into a mood that is always fatal to achievement; he had become cynical, and his faith in God was dimmed. He forgot that just one battle was not enough; that we must keep on fighting always.

How did the Lord strengthen Elijah? He first made him physically fit, then gave him something definite and inspiring to do, in telling him to go back and take an active part in the political life of his country. Elijah had the sense to get up, accept the challenge, and go to work.

What are we doing here at college? If we have come here with the idea of passing four years pleasantly, or to gain the distinction of being a college graduate, then we should not stay. If, like Elijah, we are cynical, depressed, and unbelieving, we cannot take the things Middlebury has to offer. But if we have come here in a spirit of fellowship, and belief in God, and with the determination to gain the best that life holds while we are here, then it is right we should be here, and everything is open to us.

Spanish Club Holds Informal

About 50 couples attended the informal dance held Saturday evening under the auspices of the Spanish Club in the McCullough Gymnasium. Music was furnished by Connelly, Lee, Druggel, Polhemus and Huntington. The chaperones were Senor and Senora Moreno-Lacalle, Senorita De Alda, Senorita Huici and Miss Moulton. Cider and doughnuts were sold during the evening.

Tufts Gridsters Win Saturday 6-3

forced to resort to a forward pass on the last down. Chandonnett received a pass from French but was just out of the end zone and the ball went to Middlebury on the 20-yard line. Whitney kicked out of danger. Whitney and Quackenbush did some nice punting throughout the game, averaging about fifty yards. However they were matched by the excellent kicking of French.

Whitney started the second half off by running the kickoff back twenty yards. On the next two plays he made a total of nine yards and Klevenow tore off six yards to make it first down. Lobo and Whitney took the ball ahead six yards more but Whitney was forced to kick being thrown for a loss. With the ball on the Jumbo's 20-yard mark, French kicked out of danger. An exchange of punts made it Middlebury's ball on Tufts' 40-yard mark. Lobo and Whitney made first down on the next two plays. Klevenow dropped back to kick just as the period ended.

French Makes Winning Run

On the first play in the fourth quarter, Quackenbush held the ball and Klevenow kicked it over from the 30-yard line for what seemed to be the winning points. Middlebury kicked off, Cohen bringing the ball back to the 25-yard mark. Tufts started a drive down the field from this point. Two penalties on the Blue for offside and runs by Etleman and French brought the ball to the middle of the field. Perry, Tuft's crackpasser took Etleman's place at quarter here, and immediately opened up an aerial attack. Two passes, an eight yard run by French and an offside penalty on Middlebury brought the ball to the 20-yard mark. However, the ball changed hands here when a Tuft's pass was grounded over the goal-line, and Whitney punted out of danger. After another exchange of punts it was still Tuft's ball in mid-field with only two minutes left to play. Two passes were tried but were unsuccessful. Then Perry tossed the ball to French on the 40-yard line, and with perfect interference, French was able to run the entire distance to the goal-line for the winning touchdown. Perry failed to kick goal.

Should Not Restrict Athletics, Says Peck

One of the serious problems of most colleges today is to pick and cull, in order that the plants and endowments may be utilized to the best advantage.

What I am leading up to is this—that Middlebury College, instead of deliberately advertising an indifferent attitude regarding athletics, should go out of its way to pursue a positive and constructive course. We see now that Middlebury can be a rival of big colleges, without being suspected of professionalism. Middlebury College should do everything possible to foster clean sport, and should be the last college in the East to adopt restrictive measures like the one year rule, limitation of coaches, salaries, etc.

I do not agree with the editorial in The Campus that the Harvard and T. C. A. games prove the wisdom of having adopted the one year rule. The showing against Harvard was made, not because of the one year rule, but in spite of it. Who knows but that with a 40 per cent broader field from which to draw Varsity material, Middlebury might not have beaten Harvard?

It has been rumored that the usual delegation of freshmen from Milwaukee did not come this year, because they wanted to go where they could play Varsity football four years. If that is so, it is sad for Middlebury (irrespective of athletics) to shut off that stream of sturdy manhood led by Gollnick, now bearing Middlebury's scholastic banner as a Rhodes Scholar at Oxford.

This is the psychological moment for Middlebury to take steps so to establish herself with the public that she will have so many applicants for every place in her limited freshman class that she may take her pick of brain and brawn.

Middlebury has the advantage of location in the country, of a rugged northern climate, of hills and mountains—certainly an environment to breed the spirit we want to see.

I believe the College could not invest money to better advantage (measured by academic results alone) than to build a baseball cage, a ski jump, stage a good Winter Carnival, and take frequent opportunities to turn her students loose in her own mountain forests—to mention a few of the opportunities for constructive development. Think of the benefit to scholarship alone which would follow the increase in esprit de corps resulting from such a program.

Very truly yours,
J. A. Peck '98.

they were unprepared for the stiff Williams offensive last week, but after a rest of two weeks the Lion eleven will throw its strongest forces against the Black Panther Saturday.

Percy Haughton's eleven will outweight the Middlebury team many pounds per man and so will have all the advantage in that respect. The Williams game they did not expect to win but the season has advanced too far to drop any more games and they will consequently make every effort to obtain a victory.

Coach Morey, on the other hand is going to make some radical changes in the Blue and White line-up, and although the injuries will tell heavily, the team should go to New York with renewed confidence.

According to the statement of a man who knows football and has witnessed both Harvard and Columbia contests "If Middlebury goes against Columbia the way they did against Harvard, they will defeat them without a question."

He that rides his hobby gently must always give way to him that rides his hobby hard.—Emerson.

Big Convention Meets At Hartford

addresses on "The Church's Task" and "The Man's Duty." He also conducted an open forum.

Saturday night's program was conducted entirely by the young men. The five minute testimonials of A. E. Wilson, Maine, 1923, and Norman P. Schwab, a Yale Sophomore, were most excellent. The Conference closed Sunday afternoon at 2.30 oclock with a Forum led by Sherry Day, Yale, 1911, at which many came to the definite decision to enter the Christian Ministry.
